The Department of Classical and Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations at The George Washington University invites applications for two positions at the rank of Assistant Professor in Arabic. These are non-tenure accruing 3-year renewable contractual appointments starting in the Fall 2012 semester. It might be possible for the successful candidates to begin in the Spring 2012 semester. Salary is competitive and commensurate with qualifications and experience. Basic qualifications include native or near native fluency in Arabic and a demonstrated college-level record of excellence in teaching the Arabic language at all proficiency levels and experience in using instructional technology. Ph.D. or ABD in Arabic or related field is required at the time of appointment. Preference will be given to those candidates with an excellent command of English. Application process: Interested candidates should send a letter of application, curriculum vitae, statement of teaching philosophy, summary of student course evaluations, three recent confidential letters of recommendation, and at least three samples of course syllabi and exams. Applicants are also strongly encouraged to include a recorded demonstration of their teaching Arabic. Completed applications should be send to Chair of the Arabic Search Committee, Department of Classical and Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations, The George Washington University, Phillips Hall 345, 801 22nd Street, NW, Washington, DC 20052. Only complete applications will be considered. Review of complete applications will begin on October 14, 2011 and will continue until the two positions are filled. The George Washington University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Women, people of color, veterans, and individuals with disabilities are encouraged to apply.
